October 24, 2016 at Harvard Law School

As we approached the 2016 presidential election and change of administration, there were many questions about the future of health policy that the 45th President and Congress will have to address starting in 2017. This event brought together health care experts from both sides of the aisle to discuss what health care will - and should - look like under the next administration.

CALL FOR ABSTRACTS! Transparency in Health and Health Care: Legal and Ethical Possibilities and Limits - PFC's 2017 Annual Conference

Submissions Due: No later than December 2, 2016

Full call online!

Conference: April 28, 2017 at Harvard Law School

Transparency is a relatively new concept to the world of health and health care, considering that just a few short decades ago we were still in the throes of a "doctor-knows-best" model. Today, however, transparency is found on almost every short list of solutions to a variety of health policy problems, ranging from conflicts of interest to rising drug costs to promoting efficient use of health care resources, and more.

This conference, and anticipated edited volume, will aim to: (1) identify the various thematic roles transparency has been called on to play in American health policy, and why it has emerged in these spaces; (2) understand when, where, how, and why transparency may be a useful policy tool in relation to health and health care, what it can realistically be expected to achieve, and when it is unlikely to be successful, including limits on how patients and consumers utilize information even when we have transparency; (3) assess the legal and ethical issues raised by transparency in health and health care, including obstacles and opportunities; (4) learn from comparative examples of transparency, both in other sectors and outside the United States.

We welcome submissions on both the broad conceptual questions described above and more specific policy issues listed on our website. If you are interested in participating, please send a 1-page abstract of the paper you would plan to present to petrie-flom@law.harvard.edu as soon as possible, but not later than December 2, 2016. If your abstract is selected, your final paper will be due on March 31, 2017, and you will be assigned a presentation slot for the conference.

Concurrent Surgeries: Medical, Legal, and Ethical Issues

October 27, 2016 at Harvard Law School

Concurrent, or overlapping, surgeries involve the simultaneous scheduling of substantial portions of two or more surgeries under the supervision of a single surgeon, requiring delegation of responsibility to trainees and assistants if necessary. The practice is not uncommon, especially at teaching hospitals, but patients often have no idea that their doctor may also be operating on someone else at the same time. This panel discussion described the practice, its risks and benefits, and recommended approaches to preserve patient trust and safety.

The 21st-Century Advanced Illness Care Team: How Team-based Care is Moving Medicine Beyond the Clinic into the Home and Community

November 2, 2016 at Harvard Law School

Care for advanced illness is moving beyond the hospital and physician office and into the home and community. Addressing the needs of the individual with advanced illness increasingly requires an interdisciplinary team of providers, with significant policy implications.

Part of the Project on Advanced Care and Health Policy, a collaboration between the Coalition to Transform Advanced Care \(C-TAC\) and the Petrie-Flom Center for Health Law Policy, Biotechnology, and Bioethics at Harvard Law School focused on development and spread of effective person-centered models of advanced illness care through interdisciplinary analysis of important health law and policy issues.
