A "Natural" Experiment: Consumer Confusion and Food Claims

Thursday, January 29, 2015, 12:00 PM
Harvard Law School Library, Wasserstein Hall, Milstein West B, 1585 Massachusetts Ave., Cambridge, MA

What makes food "natural"? Do consumers understand "natural" on food labels? In the absence of robust federal guidelines, are state or class action lawsuits appropriate mechanisms for addressing misleading "natural" claims? This talk examines these issues and highlights an emerging tool for regulatory science - the Immersive Technology Lab. The discussion also explores issues that regulators face as they anticipate First Amendment challenges to regulation of the food industry.
