

With the start of the academic year nearly upon us, we at the Petrie-Flom Center are excited to announce our first event of the fall term. On September 14th, we will host a Zoom panel on long-term pandemic preparedness. Together, experts from academia and private industry will discuss how we can best leverage the strengths of the public and private sectors to create equitable, sustainable infrastructure for the next public health emergency. This is just the first of many timely and informative events we will host this fall; please be sure to check back on our upcoming events page, as we update it frequently.

Also, don't miss the opportunity to contribute to our 2023 annual conference, Health Law as Private Law. Currently, we are accepting abstracts on the potential role of private law as a tool for achieving health care reform or addressing a significant health care or public health problem. We are accepting abstracts through October 17th, 2022. To learn more about what we're looking for, view our Call for Abstracts.

Spotlight on Scholarship

For Whom Does the CDC Think it Works?

No improvement in communication methods can ever address the inherent conflict of interest between providing information that protects the public's health and that which protects business interests or current office holders.
